ABSTRACT

Translation is a process in rendering source language meaning to target language meaning by producing the similar idea. The success of the translation depends on the methods that a translator uses. So a good translation has the similar meaning between source language and target language. In translating it into Indonesian, there are many ways that can be used. It has two types which are referential it and non-referential it.

In this Paper, the writer analyzes how it is translated. For the data, the writer uses J.R.R. Tolkien’s book: The Lord of the Rings: The Return of the King, both English version and Indonesian version. The goal of this Paper is to find out the strategies in translating it into Indonesian.
